

Everyone is a founder

The Problem

Do you feel like you've worked so hard, but you're still finding yourself stressed about what you're doing?

You thought that this next life change would be the one, but it feels like you're doing the same thing again.

The Problem

John is 31. He's a dad. He goes to school full time. He's a recovering AI engineer, and he's quite progressive when it comes to considering men's mental health.

John is seeking extreme wealth. He knows it's there. He just hasn't tapped it yet, and that's everything.

Why Now?

AI is making our workplace more toxic. The sprint towards figuring out what we can do is insane right now.

People, including myself, need a tool that can help them figure out who they are as a founder.

The Product

How We Make Money

Word of mouth is the biggest distribution model. Free to start, $7 a month once they use it enough.

Various tiers of monthly subscriptions to get deeper into the writing tools.

Go to Market

I show up where they already are.

I'm in the rooms, threads, or feeds my user already lives in.

The Moat

Your ideas are woven together with other founders on the platform.

You come because they have what you need, and you stay because everyone's there.

The Vision

*Eventually, it's just the way that people do invest in each other.
"Hey, are you on Tinker?"*

A two-sided marketplace and a payment network at the same time, and a social network — for the types of craft and the types of founders that have traditionally not been funded.
